The Fantasy Sports Writers Association is pleased to announce our newest Hall of Fame class:

Stephania Bell - Stephania is a pioneering medical and fantasy analyst across all sports, on all platforms. She began her ESPN career in August of 2007, providing injury analysis in print, blogs, radio, podcasts and television. She has also served as an expert for KFFL, RotoWire and XM Radio. Stephania is a physical therapist and board-certified orthopedic clinical specialist, and she was among the first writers to apply medical insight to fantasy analysis. She has held teaching positions at Samuel Merritt College and the University of Kansas.

During Stephania's ESPN career, she has appeared on SportsCenter, Fantasy Football Now, NFL Live

, Baseball Tonight

Outside The Lines.

Her work as a writer and on-air personality has won multiple awards, both within and outside the fantasy industry.

Brad Evans - Brad has won more individual FSWA writing awards than any analyst in the fantasy industry. He is a two-time Football Writer of the Year (2015, 2012) and a five-time College Sports Writer of the Year (2014, 2013, 2011, 2010, 2009), in recognition of his NCAA basketball coverage. Additionally, Brad is a featured analyst on Yahoo's Fantasy
